- Non-New Zealand residents - Contact details of someone who can explain the fees/charges

The Walk-in Centre accepts referrals from other health professionals.

The Walk-in Centre is not able to provide emergency care or treatment for unwell women.

Lead Maternity Carer (LMC)

The Walk-in Centre can help you find a Lead Maternity Carer (LMC).

A LMC is a self-employed midwife or a hospital employed midwife or a Private Obstetrician.

The changes and choices that come with pregnancy and parenting can be exciting, challenging and exhausting. Early pregnancy care from a LMC can help support you and your family/whanau through this time.

A self-employed midwife cares for you during your pregnancy, labour and birth, and when you are at home with your baby.

Hospital employed midwives work within a team. Together they will care for you during your pregnancy, birth, and when you are at home with your baby.

A Private Obstetrician cares for you during your pregnancy, labour and birth and works with self-employed midwives when you are at home with your baby. A Private Obstetrician charges a fee.

Why get early pregnancy care?

It's never too early to start your pregnancy care. You should start your pregnancy care as soon as you know you are pregnant. The healthier you are in pregnancy the healthier your baby is likely to be.

Here are some reasons why you should get care early in your pregnancy:

- To confirm you are pregnant and work out when the baby is due
- To explain the options you have for the pregnancy, caregivers and services
- To review your health, including medical and mental health
- To support you to quit smoking
- To advise what foods to avoid and what foods to enjoy when expecting a baby
- To prescribe supplements (such as vitamins) that can help you and your baby
- To explain screening options for Down Syndrome and other conditions
- To test for infections you might have that could affect the pregnancy and the baby
- To help with social stresses such as family violence and any other pregnancy concerns
